WRT 205
Developing a focused explainer topic

As I've been reading through others' suggested additions to our canon, here are some issues that especially interest me: Climate change, racism in the United States, and poverty

Looking at this list of connections, highlight key foundational concepts/ideas/ terminology—list those here. prejudice thinking, neurodiversity, diversity, poverty, and more

Review your list to the left—which of these issues do you think a person would need to understand in order to understand why this broader topic interests you? Circle them and prioritize—what's really important? What really intrigues you? Why? A person would have to really understand how minorities are held back in our society, based off the color of their skin. They are not only held back, but they have to fear dangers that white people do not have to face. For example, police brutality is an example of a danger they have to fear. It is important to identify prejudice behavior in our society, so we can then go about making changes that will benefit us all. The topic of racism in society intrigues me, because growing up it was around me, just by living in the United States, but it was somehow hidden to me, because I did not really understand what minorities like the black community go through. Now I want to learn more about the topic so I can be a better citizen and human being.

Frame your project statement here: I think [racism in society] is a really important topic in organizational culture, so I'm going to explain this foundational idea [racism in society] to you all.
[In other words, you're going to focus on some very specific component that is essential to our understanding of the larger whole; you're going to articulate both the small bit and the Big Picture here.]

Here are some ways in which these issues connect to other things we've read and/or to prior interests I have: I have been interested in climate change for a while now, because it is one of my concerns of this growing world. I would like to learn more by researching and analyzing the topic. The issue of racism relates to the topic of diversity in the work place, because race is one the diversities that we see effecting who gets jobs.